MISS MARY ANDERSON AS JULIET .- OT the 15th of January-the second week of the new year-Miss Mary Anderson, young actress, who comes endorsed by many of the papers of the West, and who made her debut in Louisville, Ky., where she received the most flattering notices, appears at the Richmond Theatre. One of the St. Louis papers has the following of Miss Anderson: "She played the heroine [Juliet] with many fine and effective touches, making several exhibitions of her extraordinary framatic power. Her Juliet shows a great improvement in general outline and tone over the figure she first presented here. The lighter shades of the character are greatly improved. The balcony scene has gained impulse and warmth, and the early scenes with the nurse are infused with gayer, girlish spirit, which enhances the ubsequent tragic effects by contrast. While the tragic passages are rendered with no more power than characterized Miss Anderson's first efforts, they are worked up more
